

Simple Insights with Suggestions

- Most published author: Stephen King has published the most books.
→ Suggestion: Authors who publish more often stay visible and build loyal readers.
- Most common genres: Genre fiction is the most common, followed by nonfiction, fiction, and children's books.
→ Suggestion: Focus on genre fiction for sales, but keep fiction, nonfiction and children's books for variety.
- Language dominance: English dominates the dataset
→ Suggestion: Adding more non-English books could reach new readers
- Correlations among features: More units sold improves sales rank. A better rank increases visibility which in turn drives more units sold. Gross sales and publisher revenue rise together.
→ Suggestion: Boost unit sales with promotions to improve rank and revenue.
- Distribution of units sold: Most books sell fewer than 10,000 copies. Only a few sell 30,000–60,000.
→ Suggestion: Identify potential bestsellers early and support them with strong marketing.
- Genre variability in gross sales: Genre fiction is unpredictable, nonfiction and fiction are moderately variable, children's books are stable.
→ Suggestion: Balance risk by investing in stable children's books and taking chances on genre fiction.
- Ratings vs gross sales: Ratings don't strongly affect sales. Some mid-rated books sell very well.
→ Suggestion: Focus on marketing, visibility, and author branding rather than relying only on ratings.
